Old-Fashioned Democracy. We have not seen in a long time a Democratic platform so much like those of ante-bellum days as is the one adopted last Wednesday by the Democrats of Pennsylvania in State Convention assem-

Democracy. It is a hopeful sign that

If both parties would agree to be governed by the safe rule of constitutional construction set forth in the above resolution, and which in former days was set at the facts of the case? forth in every Democratic platform, State or national, the Union would have before it the prospect of a long life. An "indissoluble Union of indestructible States" is not possible under the loose construction which the Republican party puts upon the Federal Constitution, and particularly upon the tenth article of amendments (mentioned in the resolution quoted above). The tenth amend-

We trust that this Pennsylvania Demoeratic platform will be laid down in other States. It is time to recur to first principles.

General Manone intends to make his fight, so it is said, in the Valley and the Southwest and leave the black districts to take care of themselves. This policy is based of course upon the theory that the negroes will vote his ticket without solicitation or instruction. General Manone knows that the negro is not open to argument in the matter of voting. He "goes it blind" for the Republican candidates. Camenon before he ran for Governor had said harder things of the negroes than perhaps any other man in Virginia. But that fact did not prevent his election.

There are nearly eight million colored people in the Democratic southern coun-try, and they have but one member of Congress to represent them. - Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette,

Indiana and New York elected Mr. HARRISON President. In both those States the negroes hold the balance of power. All the Federal offices in the United States were placed in Republican offerings to-day aggregated $716,550. All bands by negro voters. Yet in all the hands by negro voters. Yet in all the North there is not even one negro con-ressman—not one, although the Re-ablicens profess to be the peculiar by druggists.
